

Polaris is looking for a Danish or Swedish part-time Analyst

Does this sound like you?

★ Curious to know more about how the business world functions and investments are made?

★ Eager to get hands-on experience in how business theory is applied in practice?

★ Considering a future career in a top tier investment bank or management consultancy?

As a part-time Analyst at Polaris, you will get an opportunity to gain extraordinary insights into the world of private equity. Strategic road mapping, financial analysis, investment decisions and operational development is all part of our everyday life, creating a unique opportunity to prepare - both professionally and personally - for your future business career. Our Analysts stay with us for two years, after which they usually start their careers in leading investment banks or management consultancies in Copenhagen or London; The Boston Consulting Group, McKinsey & Co, Goldman Sachs, and J.P. Morgan among others.

Job description

Our group of 4-6 Analysts are an integral part of the Polaris team, counting 20 full-time employees. The position comes with a large degree of responsibility and a wide variety of assignments, including:

- ★ Preparation for investment decisions
 - E.g. presentations, financial and strategic analyses, interviews, and discussion papers
- ★ Strategy projects for your 3-4 allocated portfolio companies
- ★ Company deep-dives and industry studies
- ★ Participation in valuation, financial modeling and return calculations
- ★ Administrative tasks such as maintenance of information databases, Polaris website and equivalent

The workload will be approximately 20 hours/week with flexibility from both sides, allowing you to excel in your studies and Polaris to get support when needed. You are offered an attractive salary. Polaris also opens up for the opportunity to take a full-time analyst position after your bachelor studies, enabling you to apply for a Master's degree abroad or simply to add an additional layer of work experience to your resume. Note that Polaris invests substantial resources in Analysts' personal and professional development and, therefore, requires a two-year commitment in return.

Qualifications

You are fluent in either Danish or Swedish and among the brightest of your class. You have strong analytical skills, good knowledge of Excel and PowerPoint, and excellent English capabilities. You are preferably about to embark on a Master's degree such as FIR, FSM, AEF, FIN, Polit, or Oecon in the fall 2016 or a third-year bachelor student from a similar study concentration.

More information

Please contact Analyst Mathias Egede Glahn (mg@polarisequity.dk, +4524808380) or Analyst Nicolai Kjær Jacobsen (nkj@polarisequity.dk, +4541105680) if you need more information.

Deadline

We are open for applications as of now and will conduct ongoing interviews. Applications should be sent no later than Sunday September 25, 2016. Apply by emailing cover letter, CV, grade transcripts and any references to mq@polarisequity.dk.

Please note that we will have another round of recruitment starting at the beginning of December 2016 for those of you who are interested in the Analyst position but on exchange during the current fall semester.

