Sealing System declared bankrupt

Sealing System, which produces automated packaging systems, has been declared bankrupt.

Polaris owns 75% of the company.

"It is with deep regret that we announce the closure of Sealing System. Despite our best efforts, we were unable to save the company and the jobs it provided. We have invested in the company, and naturally, we are disappointed with this outcome," says partner at Polaris, Allan Bach Pedersen.

Since 1998, Polaris has invested in 55 companies.

"We made every effort to rescue the business. Unfortunately, it is rare for us to reach this point, but the company's project portfolio did not yield sufficient profitability to sustain a viable business moving forward. As a result, we had no choice but to make a definitive decision," says Allan Bach Pedersen.
